If Microsoft is allowed to get away with this slap on the hand that the Justice Department calls a settlement, then we know longer have to wonder who will control the world of technology when it comes to operating systems and anything currently known as software....Microsoft is a monopoly and it seems the Justice Department is just allowing them to continue to be one! I hope the states still holding law suits against them succeed where a weak-kneed Justice Department is obviously not willing to. If Microsoft is allowed to continue to set the standards we see in the computer world today, we can obviously forget anything that even comes close to excellence! And so much for innovation because they have yet to even come close to such a thing....the only thing they seem able to be innovative about is screwing the American public and using "so-called" representatives in the US government as their agents.

Sincerely,
